Spitzer Joins Salacoa Valley

David and Susan Vaughn, owners of Salacoa Valley Farms, are pleased to announce the addition of Ben Spitzer as General Manager of the operation based in Fairmount, GA. Ben brings many years of experience, with several breeds, in the seedstock business.

Spitzer grew up in the Brangus business on his family operation in South Carolina. It was during this time he realized he wanted have a career in the beef industry. He was heavily involved in the day to day workings of his family operation.

Ben attended Okalahoma State University in Stillwater, OK majoring in Animal Science with a production emphasis. While at OSU, Ben was able to be involved with several research projects as a student employee. He also was fortunate to work with a local Angus operation in Stillwater as a student herdsman. Upon graduation from OSU, Spitzer enrolled in the Integrated Resource Management master's program at Colorado State University.

Ben then joined the Red Angus Association of America as Communications/Member Services Director in Denton, TX. In this position, he represented the Red Angus breed at numerous field days, conferences, conventions and sales as well as state and regional association meetings. He also worked with breed promotion through advertising, press releases and also a monthly column for the ARA Magazine.

Ben is excited to have the opportunity to work with the Vaughn family and the Salacoa Valley program. He states "I am truly honored and excited to be able to be a part of the Salacoa Valley Farms program. They have a long history of quality cattle and integrity in business. I look forward to helping in Salacoa Valley's continued success. Contact Ben Spitzer at 706-337-2295 or ben@svfbulls.com.
